SER O ESTAR
TWO VERBS, ONE WORD

not permanent vs temporary — that rule gets the hard ones backwards

1. Ask one question and it is not "how long will this last?"

¿Qué es? — what is it?

Identity, category, definition. The thing itself: who it is, what it's made of, where it's from, when it happens. Ser classifies.

¿Cómo está? — what state is it in?

Condition, position, the result of something that happened. Not what it is — how it currently stands. Estar describes a state.

Why "permanent vs temporary" has to go — it gets all four of these the wrong way round:
Madrid está en España (a thousand years) · Hoy es lunes (24 hours) · La fiesta es en mi casa (one evening) · Está muerto (forever)

2. Ser — what the thing is facts that define it identity	Es mi hermano. Soy Pierre.

origin	Soy sueco. El queso es de España.
job	Es médica. — no article after ser
whose	El libro es de mi padre.
material	La casa es de madera.
character	Es alto. Son simpáticos.
clock, date	Son las tres. Hoy es lunes.
the total	Son 9,50 €.
events	La fiesta es en mi casa. El examen es mañana.

3. Estar — the state it is in where it stands, and how it is right now location	Madrid está en España. ¿Dónde está el baño?

condition	La sopa está fría. Está enfermo.
feeling	Estoy cansado pero estoy feliz.
after a change	La puerta está abierta.
-ing, right now	Está lloviendo. Estoy trabajando.
estar de	Está de vacaciones. Está de camarero. — working as one, for now

4. One adjective, two meanings here duration explains nothing at all — the verb is the meaning

	SER — WHAT IT IS	ESTAR — THE STATE IT'S IN
aburrido	es aburrido — boring	está aburrido — bored
listo	es listo — clever	está listo — ready rico	es rico — wealthy	está rico — it tastes good bueno	es bueno — a good person, good quality	está bueno — tasty · of a person, good-looking malo	es malo — bad, wicked	está malo — ill · of food, off
verde	es verde — green, the colour	está verde — unripe
vivo	es vivo — sharp, lively	está vivo — alive

5. The two places it catches you both look like exceptions; neither is Location splits in two.

A thing or a person sits somewhere → estar
¿Dónde está la casa? · Madrid está en España.
An event happens somewhere → ser
¿Dónde es la fiesta? · El concierto es en el parque.
The test: if English could say takes place, use ser.

estar + participle = the result.
Someone did it; this is how it ended up.
La puerta está abierta · está roto · está sentado · está dormido está casado · está muerto — the two that make "permanent" collapse
These are states arrived at, which is why estar wins however long they last.

6. And sometimes it is neither tener takes over where English keeps saying to be

Tengo hambre · sed — I'm hungry · thirsty
Tengo frío · calor — I'm cold · hot Tengo sueño — I'm sleepy
Tengo miedo · prisa — I'm afraid · in a hurry
Tengo veinte años — I'm twenty · never soy veinte
Tienes razón — you're right and the weather is a third verb again:
Hace frío — the air · tengo frío — me · está frío — my coffee

If one line survives: ser says what a thing is, estar says what state it is in. Ask which you mean before you ask how long it lasts — está muerto lasts forever and hoy es lunes lasts a day.
